Secrets of Successful Cross-Sector Collaborations

Designed and facilitated by Dr Sandra Mandic, PhD, PMP

Many challenges faced by modern society require extensive partnerships and collaboration of organisations, teams and individuals from multiple disciplines and sectors. Building skills for working across sectors is not a luxury – it is a necessity in the 21st century.

This training will help participants translate experience-based, often tacit knowledge into practical insights to strengthen their skills for cross-sectoral work.

Training Objectives

Introduce a framework for planning and managing cross-sector collaborations

Share insights from a world-class example of a successful cross-sector research collaboration

Provide an opportunity for participants to reflect on and share their experiences with cross-sectoral work

Target Audience

Relevant to professionals from various sectors who are interested in or participating in cross-sectoral initiatives, including researchers, academics, policy makers, practitioners, consultants, programme leaders and project and programme managers
